ABOUT BONO

The lead singer of Irish rock band U2, Bono was born Paul David Hewson in Dublin. He met The Edge, Larry Mullen Jr. and Adam Clayton at school, and in 1978 U2 was formed. Acknowledged as one of the best live acts in the world, U2 have sold over 170 million albums and won numerous awards, including 22 Grammys. In 2005, U2 were inducted into the Rock & Roll Hall of Fame and this December they received the Kennedy Center Honors.

Alongside his role in U2, Bono is a groundbreaking activist. A leader in Jubilee 2000's Drop the Debt campaign, he next took on the fight against HIV/AIDS and extreme poverty, co-founding sister organizations ONE and (RED). With ONE, Bono has lobbied heads of state and legislatures all around the world, helping to ensure the passage of health and development programs, such as the U.S. PEPFAR AIDS program, which alone has saved 20 million lives. (RED) — which turns companies into a cavalry to fight AIDS — has generated $700 million for the Global Fund to treat and prevent AIDS in Africa.

Bono has received a number of awards for his music and activism, including the Freedom of the City of Dublin (with U2), an honorary British knighthood, the Fulbright Prize for International Understanding, and TIME magazine's Person of the Year (along with Bill and Melinda Gates). He lives in Dublin with his wife Ali and their family.
